

1. Per-subject collapse

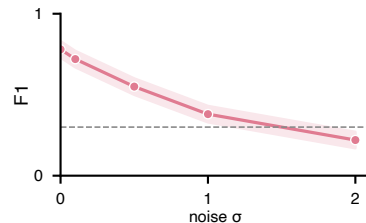

Aggregate accuracy hides catastrophic failure on a subset of subjects

2. Modality shortcut

Removing one sensor at test time collapses prediction. Model leaned on one modality.

3. Sensor degradation

Test-time noise drops F1 toward chance across architectures.

Three faces of one structural problem:

distribution shift current fusion architectures cannot bridge

Proposed direction:

neuro-inspired architectural priors (e.g., cross-modal generative)

